Finding Articles

Use "HERMES-Search"

For materials search, we recommend HERMES-Search (the search box on the Library website), which provides information for you to find various materials from physical items, E-books, E-journals or Literature (Articles and Theses). If the material is held in the Library, the search results will be linked to HERMES-Catalog that shows you information about the locations

Search tips

▼Change search keywords

Keyword topics might be too general or too specific. Try other keywords as different keywords bring different search results.

- ① Change to similar or related terms
"company" → "corporation" / "organization"
- ② Change to broader or narrower terms
"university" → "school" (broader terms)
→ "national university" (narrower terms)

Rephrasing search keywords can help you:

- Clarify your research question
- Narrow down the topic

Open Access Version

In some cases, HERMES-Search results will show you a link to "Open access version"

Open Access Version is a version utilized under the author's permission which can be accessed online for free. Please be careful when citing, as it is different from the published version in the journal, pre-reviewed paper and preprints.

Refer to the link below for more details about "Open Access".
